

Eleonora Oreggia

1976

Milan, IT

Eleonora Oreggia (also known as xname) is an interdisciplinary artist, writer and researcher born in Milan and based in London. She received a Laurea (Master Degree) Summa Cum Laude in Visual Arts from the University of Bologna (DAMS, Drama Art and Music Studies), with a thesis in Semiotics of Audiovisuals. In 2003 she moved to Amsterdam (Leonardo scholarship) to work as editor and researcher at Netherlands Institute for Media Art (NIMK). In 2008/2009 she became Researcher in Design at Jan van Eyck Academie in Maastricht where she developed the metaphysical software Virtual Entity. In London she has been awarded a practice based MPhil in Cultural Studies from Goldsmiths College and she is currently pursuing a fully funded PhD in Media & Arts Technology at Queen Mary University of London.

Her work, consisting of audiovisual pieces, software art, interactive installations and live performances, has been shown in many institutes, galleries and festivals over Europe, Asia and America - and over the Net. "My work, mixing different practices, talks about social and individual identities, and their interfacing with reality and imagination". Her live compositions transform light and other electromagnetic frequencies in sound waves through self built synthesizers and complex semi chaotic machines. Recent shows and commissions include London Sinfonietta, Arts Council England, Union Chapel, the Barbican, V&A Museum.
